First Female President

Dr Jennifer Martinick is a proven valued member of the hair loss international community.

Not only has Dr Martinick developed the Martinick Technique™; a process of methods and practices performed during each procedure to minimize trauma, she has also pioneered new techniques, including the 'snail-track' method to provide both natural and undetectable results in hair transplantation.

As a result of her sustained contribution, Dr Jennifer Martinick has recently been elected as President of the International Society of Hair Restoration Surgery (ISHRS), with over 2000 members representing 43 countries.

Dr Martinick is the first female president of the Society and her contribution has been mainly the artistic dimension essential to achieving natural and undetectable results.

Whilst building on a long established and valued role of promoting education, research, ethics and camaraderie, Dr Martinick is committed to ensuring that the International Society of Hair Restoration Surgery (ISHRS) remains both prominent and relevant in our changing and challenging economic and social environment.

In her new role, Dr Martinick intends to continue to promote the Society's presence at large and encourage the practice of delivering the 'Gold Standard' in hair transplantation throughout the world.

Dr Martinick's first prominence on the world scene was the receipt of the ISHRS 'Platinum Follicle' award in New York (2003.) Since then, she has progressively made significant contribution to the scientific, technical and artistic know-how in this area of cosmetic medicine.
